Excerpt: .ibo: dum erus adueniat a foro, opperiar domi. 917-929. The close of the scene undoubtedly shows two parallel versions. There is very close correspondence between 917-918 and 923-924 (note especially the repetition of dei immortales); between 920 ibo intro and 929 nunc intro ibo. But l. 920 implies that Agorastocles is in the house, while l. 929 states that he is to return a foro. We must therefore recognize two versions: (1) ll. 917-922; and (2) ll. 923-929. Evidence for the genuineness of the former version is found in the jingle ero.ero in the last line; 18 and this version agrees with l. 808 (which, as we have just seen, is probably genuine) in representing Agorastocles as inside the house. Both A and P give the entire passage.
