Paleontological evidence may also be used. But more than this is not profitable. The following types may be profitably studied in order to bring out the idea as stated above. In this case, as in the preceding, and as also in the succeeding points, the types are not given in the order in which they should be studied-(a) Paramecium and its allies, amoeba and vorticella. (b) Hydra and its allies, including the hydroid colony, and coral. The fresh water sponge may also be introduced here, (o) The earth worm and its allies, -the leech and flatworms. (d) The insects, including the grasshopper, cricket and locust; the butterfly with the moth; the house fly with the horse fly and mosquito. (e) The snail with its allies, -the sing and the fresh water olam. (f)...
